Dear Carrie*

I sigh every time I receive a letter from you to find what nice letters and interesting ones you can write me, while mine to you are such stupids. You ought to study Rhetoric, principally for the sake of punctuation, and then write a little plainer and your Utters wouldA"perfect.»* I must praise your last one, there was not a word hut what X could read. Have you tried the "second string to your bow," shooting? It would have been the only one I should have attempted. "No studying law for me." h a year, for as you are so apt a student no longer time will be required for understanding law thoroughly, I shall hear of Miss Carrie Pease practising law at the bar, and when I return home I hope to greet you as my sister, "Judge" Pease.

Mamma wrtte that George G. had invited you to attend a ball, to be given the 22nd of last month. Did you go, and if so how did you enjoy yourself? Were you not aware, that Ash Wednesday and Washlntons birthday were one and the same day? We have such nice little meetings now. Miss Garland, the Secretary, reads the Episcopal service and we all sing* An organ has been engaged from Poughkeepsle aad when some-one plays on that, we get along very nicely, for none of the chants in the evening service are difficult* Miss Garland told her Bible class that next Sunday would be her last here. I am sorry that she is going away just now, but presume some scholar will take her place In our meetings. Are you

•till studying Philosophy, or have you given that up lor your mora interesting one? Wo have finished reading Caesar lor this year and have now commenced Cicero, I like it very much, hut am surprised to lind that X do not remember anything at all about It. From new until the first ol April, we have to read lour orations; Just twice as much ss you sccompiished in a yearl

I received a letter Irom Aunt Maria Robinson last week. She has heard irom Aunt Carrie again. Aunt writes, "Grandma has much improved in mind since leaving here, realises new that she Is In Jamesville, and (Aunt Maria) wants me to come next spring and visit her, snd wanted Aunt Carrie to buy a wedding present Irom her, Grandma, to Carrie Raynor, who has Just been married." I take that from Aunt's letter, because she says that as you Appear disposed to drop the correspondence she will let you do so. Yesterday the snow was determined to fall, and the sua was determined to prevent it. I don't know which would have conquered II the time had not come lor the sun to go to bed. That settled the matter and the snow loll as long as it chose covering the ground beautifully. However, the sua rose early and melted in a few hours last nights labor. I meant to tell you ol the lecture by Curtis, upon Sir Philip Sydney and the one delivered since by ProI. Bacchus (Backus F of Vassar College, about the literature ol the nineteenth century. Suffice it to say that both were good. Curtis is the most fascinating speaker I ever heard. I am expecting the ten oclock bell every moment,
