

Thursday, 11 a.m.

No letter again this morning, what can be the matter. Last night I dreamed I was out walking and met you, Ma, coming to the college. You were ill and had come east to consult Physicians. But dreams go by contraries and so I will try and not worry, Madame is very sick, and so we do not recite again to-day. Last night it cleared off and was much colder, wind blew hard and is still blowing from the north. I am so hungry to-day I do not know how I can wait until dinner time. I won't mail this until after the noon mail comes, maybe there will be a letter come then. I hope you will have time to write me three letters a week. Pa I do think you might write me oftener. If you see Fred Flint and have an opportunity remember me to him, and tell him I should have liked to have had him call when he went home. I wrote to Mrs. Holmes and to Addie yesterday. Why shall I not write to Mary Willson. She has written me two letters lately, and I can not imagine what the reason can be that I must not answer them. Pa what are you thinking about the Centennial? The time is drawing near, only fifteen weeks before you must be here, if you come down. I could be at the depot all ready for N. Y. or you could stop over one train and come out here. Do come, there will not be another in 100 years, and that won't be the first one. What shall I do with my furs? And why could you not send my Japanese down in a trunk then I could put my extra things in it and when you come down you could take it back with you without any extra expense. That would not cost as much as to buy a new trunk and we do not need a new trunk. Friday I took my watch in to one of the Jewelry stores Friday. Where a number of the girls have had satisfactory work done. He said the works were all right the reason it would not go was because the spring to the case, which was broken, had slipped out of place and stopped it. All it wanted was a new spring. As I have no French Nellie and I am going in town after it this afternoon. I am afraid they will not put my name in the catalogue "Addis." They will say it is Adelaide.

If they do, will write for you to tell them my name is Addie, no more or no less.

Just came up from dinner, no letter I what is the matter!
Bill of fare, ham, eggs, icecream, &c In great haste-
Your loving daughter
Addie Thompson
