

Oct. 31, '09

Dear Family -

We are all hugging ourselves first because Junior Party was such a success, and 2d [Second] because it's all over!! It was called the "[unreadable] Junior Exposition," and downstairs they had the Gov't Building (Prexy and Mrs. K. and the Pres. of Students) and the Liberal Arts Building (Freshman and Senior Rooms) and the [Transportation] Building - containing the Gym [horse], the Elevator "Not Running," the Bun-Cart that trundles the desserts around campus - and the laundry cart and the rolling chair! There was also an Aquarium (the pool, empty of course) in which was the Blue-Fish, the Star-Fish, the Shark, the Weak-Fish, the [unreadable] eave (rope ravelled out) and the Swan. The Freshman were served in a Japanese Tea Room, and then conducted upstairs to "[Yancey's Refined Dance Hall," where Gent's were 35c [cents] and ladies free, and dancers were requested not to drown out the orchestra.

When all the Freshman had been thro' [through], they were taken to Phil Hall where there was a Vaudeville. Lili as "Jessie DeCoy" in the "Pajama-Pajama Dance" was fine. There was a strong-man, and then came the skit I was in called "Freshman Shopping" or "As Others [unreadable]." There were some take-offs of famous Freshman, and two very good dances. Then our president presented the Freshman president with their banner on which they all went wild with joy. We sang and cheered and then ran home.

Open configuration options

This evening Caroline and Lili and I went to the Inn for supper - each having been bidden by a Freshman; I guess we're pretty swell. Tell Logan "These dear Sophomores had our beds all turned down for us. Weren't they Just too swee - er?"

"I am weary unto death," so I will close right here. Hope everything is going all right.

Affectionately
Marjorie

Postmark: POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.

10--30AM
NOV 1 09

Dr. Alexander W. MacCoy
Mrs. William P. Logan
Overbrook Ave., and 58th St.
Philadelphia

P.S. I forgot to tell you I saw E. Steinbach today. He was spending Sun. [Sunday] w.
[with] Dr. T. He looked finely and asked to be remember to every body.