Administrative History

Vassar College's Black Studies Program was established in the Fall of 1969, one of a number of similar programs established at colleges and universities across the country in the wake of the Civil Rights Movement. With recommendations and urging from the Students' Afro-American Society (SAS), a multidisciplinary program in Black Studies was approved by the Board of Trustees in February, 1969. The Urban Black Studies Center was also established and opened off-campus that year to provide educational opportunities in Black studies and Black history for Poughkeepsie residents and Vassar students. However, both initiatives were considered experimental and not assured of permanent funding.

On October 22, 1969, the SAS presented the College's administration a list of demands related to the Black Studies Program, the Urban Center, and student services. Among their concerns were: the inability of the Black Studies Program to grant degrees; a lack of Black faculty; a lack of funding for the program; a lack of transportation between campus and the Urban Center; and a lack of contiguous housing for the exclusive use of African-American students. Dissatisfied with the administration's response to these demands, 32-35 students occupied the first floor of the Main Building on October 30 and barricaded themselves inside, including administrative offices, the mail room, and the campus switchboard. They remained until November 1, when the College and Trustees agreed to most of the protestors demands. The occupation drew substantial national publicity. The Catlin Report, formally the report of the Joint Ad-Hoc Committee on the Education of Minority Students, recommended increasing the number of Black students, faculty, staff, administration, and trustees; a larger proportion of financial aid to Black students; a commitment to the Black Studies concentration equal to others in the Vassar curriculum; a commitment to the Urban Center as part of the academic Black studies program; separate housing as an option available to Black students (but no dormitory assigned exclusively to Black students for legal reasons), and a cultural center for Black students. The Board of Trustees approved the report in December, 1970.

Renamed the Africana Studies Program in 1976, the program is the oldest of Vassar's multi-disciplinary programs.

Scope and Content Note

The records document the creation of the Urban Center for Black/Africana Studies, beginning in 1968. Included are faculty, trustee, administration, and student reports and correspondence documenting the establishment and early growth of the program. Also included are student handouts, administrative correspondence and reports, and press clippings recording the extensive coverage of the 1969 occupation of Main, which played a significant role in the program's development. Records of the Urban Center and material related to its activities within the Poughkeepsie community are included. Correspondence also records fund-raising efforts for the projects.
