Biographical Note

Lucy Maynard Salmon, historian, was born in Fulton, NY, on 27 July 1853. After attending a local seminary, she entered the University of Michigan in 1872. Upon graduation she taught high school for five years, but tired of the monotony of small-town life and returned to Ann Arbor to earn her master's degree in modern European history, English, and American constitutional history. Following three unhappy years of teaching at Indiana State Normal School, she went to Bryn Mawr for graduate study in American history. In 1887 she became Vassar's first teacher of history and was made a full professor in 1889, remaining at Vassar for the rest of her career.

Modern history was a recent addition to the American college curriculum, and Miss Salmon was one of its most innovative teachers. Conducting her advanced classes as seminars, she encouraged students to do original research and to explore unconventional sources. Miss Salmon was instrumental in liberalizing Vassar's curriculum and administration. She stressed the importance of current affairs and the periodical press, and introduced classes on the newspaper and the use of historical materials, with particular emphasis on scholarly research techniques. Outside the history department she actively worked for a better library, fewer required courses, and greater influence of the faculty on the college administration.

Her publications, which included Domestic Service, The Newspaper and the Historian, and The Newspaper and Authority were expressive of her faith in democracy. Two books published posthumously, Why is History Rewritten? (1929) and Historical Material (1933), reflect her devotion to the "New History" of scholars like James Harvey Robinson. A pacifist and dedicated suffragist, Miss Salmon was a notable participant in local public affairs, in the American Historical Association, and in the Association of Collegiate Alumnae. She continued to be an active scholar and teacher until she suffered a fatal stroke in 1927. A biography, Apostle of Democracy: the Life of Lucy Maynard Salmon (1943), was written by her Vassar colleague, Louise Fargo Brown.

Scope and Content Note

The Lucy Maynard Salmon Collection includes the personal papers of Lucy Maynard Salmon along with two smaller collections of papers belonging to her mother, Maria Clara Maynard Salmon, and her brother, Pomeroy L. Salmon. Types of material represented in the collection include: incoming and outgoing correspondence; published and unpublished manuscripts; pamphlets, periodicals, news clippings (originals and photocopies), and other printed materials; diaries and journals; reminiscences and genealogies; and photographs.

A substantial portion of the Lucy Maynard Salmon Collection dates between 1887 and 1927, the years during which Lucy Maynard Salmon served on the Vassar College Faculty. Subjects covered by the collection include: the development of the history department at Vassar College; methods of teaching history; the use of original source materials in research; the women's suffrage movement; the University of Michigan; the Fulton Falley Seminary; home economics; domestic service; and other personal, family and profession issues.

There is also information about professional organizations such as the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, American Association of University Women, and the American Historical Association.

Correspondents include Caroline E. Page Salmon, Pomeroy Lyman Salmon, George Salmon, Lucy Ella Maynard Sloss, and other family members, 1859-1926; Henry Noble MacCracken, James Monroe Taylor, Louise Fargo Brown, Eloise Ellery, C. Mildred Thompson, and other Vassar associates, 1887-1927; Edith Rickert, Amelia MacDonald Cutler, Helena Grow Rottschaefer, and other Vassar students, 1890-1927; James Burrell Angell, Katharine Lee Bates, George Lincoln Burr, Alice Freeman Palmer, M. Carey Thomas, Lelia Y. Burt, H.V. Clulow, Rachel Larrabee, Gertrude H. Mason, and other educational and political contemporaries, 1870-1927; Adelaide Underhill, Vassar College Librarian with whom Salmon shared a house, 1894-1927, and condolence letters to Underhill on Salmon's death, 1927-1931; and round-robin letters from student social groups at the University of Michigan, "Q. Ceekers," and at Bryn Mawr, "The Learned Six," 1874-1893.

Papers of her mother, Maria Clara Maynard Salmon, include class notes, circa 1834, diaries and account books, 1840-1863, and correspondence with Miranda Smith Belden, George Salmon, James B. Maynard, Frederick W. Lyman, and Lucy Piper Maynard, 1831-1861.

Papers of her brother, Pomeroy Lyman Salmon, include correspondence with family and friends, primarily Pomeroy's parents, George Salmon and Maria Clara Maynard Salmon, and his son, Maynard Hubbard Salmon, as well as family records and documents, financial records, memorabilia, and published ephemera.
