

Page 1

France bleeding in every pore has played football. With royalty and pretention as no other nation in Europe has. Her mobs excesses and bloody revolutions are but the healthy exaction of a proud nation against oppression. To a people who despise every symbol of aristocracy what are palace gardens, statuary, decorations, cloth of gold, veiled pictures of departed royalty! – naught but hideous ghosts of a hated past that have lived and fattened on a nation's blood. France is nearer republican freedom today, with a foreign foe in her soil, than with the usurper on her throne. For Louis Napoleon his family, pretentions, have all been swept away by the high tide of war

Elizabeth Cady Stanton
New York Feb 18th 1871

---

Page 2

[typed transcript]

Original in
Alma Lutz Collection

France bleeding in every pore has played football. With royalty and pretention as no other nation in Europe has. Her mobs excesses and bloody revolutions are but the healthy exaction of a proud nation against oppression. To a people who despise every symbol of aristocracy what are palace gardens, statuary, decorations, cloth of gold, veiled pictures of departed royalty! – naught but hideous ghosts of a hated past that have lived and fattened on a nation's blood. France is nearer republican freedom today, with a foreign foe in her soil, than with the usurper on her throne. For Louis Napoleon his family, pretentions, have all been swept away by the high tide of war.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton
New York Feb. 18th, 1871

---

Autograph Notes, 1874-02-13