

Page 1

Some voices tell us Katey did,
Emanate from a man's rib,
Others tell us Katey did'nt [sic].
That she was never in it,
But I think from Katy's grace,
And the beauty of her face,
And her many virtues blended
That from the angels she descended,

(over)
(March 1893)

---

Page 2

These were the jingles the Dana Editor of the N.Y. Sun copied when calling on E.C.S and put on the editorial page.
(H.S.B)

---

Page 3

A different story re. Publication in the New York Sun is told in extract from Mrs. Stanton's diary p. 296 Vol II. Stanton and Blatch
"Reminiscence and Diary"
This is probably a trial version of the poem written for Katherine D.
Blake on her birthday.
Alma Lutz.

---

Page 4

[typed transcript]

(COPY)                      Original in Alma Lutz Collection.

Some voices tell us Katey did,
Emanate from a man's rib,
Others tell us Katey did'nt,
That she was never in it,
But I think firm Katy's grace,
And the beauty of her face,
And her many virtues blended
When [That] from the angles she descended,

(March 1893)

Notes on back copy of poem as follows:

These were the jingles the Dana Editor of the N.Y. Sun copied on E.C.S and put on the editorial page.
(H.S.B)

A different story re. publication in the New York Sun is told in extract from Mrs. Stanton's diary p. 296 Vol II. Stanton and Blatch
"Reminiscence and Diary".

This is probably a trial version of the poem written for Katherine D.
Blake on her birthday.

Alma Lutz.