Administrative History

When Vassar College opened in 1861, Cyrus Swan was appointed as the first Superintendent, "charged with the general oversight, care and management of the grounds, buildings, furniture, apparatus, livestock and any other material property of the College." The superintendent supervised 80 employees devoted to the upkeep of the College's physical property. In 1905, a Trustee Committee on Landscape Gardening, later renamed the Committee on Buildings and Grounds, was established to oversee the activities of the superintendent and his staff. In 1916, the superintendent became a member of the college's Business Administration rather than an officer of the Board of Trustees, and by 1922 the position had been renamed General Manager.

In 1968, the position of General Manager was eliminated, and the Director of Plant Operations Division began reporting to the Vice President for Administration. Plant Operations was renamed Facilities Operations in 1984, at which time its offices were consolidated into the Service Building and its chief officer was the Director of Facilities Operations. In 1993, Facilities Operations was renamed Buildings and Grounds, and by 2016, the name had changed back to Facilities Operations.

Facilities Operations at Vassar College is responsible for the maintenance and improvement of the campus architecture and landscape. Building Trades, Grounds Services, Mechanical Services, Custodial Services, and the Work Control Center are administered by Facilities Operations. Other programs, such as Facilities Systems and Services, Project Management, Energy Management and the Service Response Center also fall under the jurisdiction of Vassar's Facilities Operations. In addition to basic services, the department also provides materials and labor for special events, renovation projects and major construction or demolition services that require the assistance of outside contractors and service providers.
